Final Project Proposal

For my final project website, I want to create a fictional restaurant page. It'll follow a similar flow to the previous pages where one will feature mainly photos or a visual element. For my first page, I'll have the restaurant name which may be the element that I chose to animate because I don't think I want a photo or gif element to move. Additionally I'll have an "about us" section, along with links to my two other pages. For the second page, it will have the menu which you can switch between depending on lunch/dinner or drinks. The menus will be centered to the page with the options above each. I'm a bit unsure if I want to have the menus be sticky or scroll on with the page as it might be a bit hard to read all items on the menus if they are sticky. I'll also include the reservations option on this page, this will be in the form of buttons to choose for however many people or like a scroller with the times if I'm able to do it without it being too difficult. I also might add a contact us "form" where you could input your information.  For my third page, I'll include a gallery of both like "professional" plate pictures and the "snapshot" version of photos that the fictional guests may have taken. I've included some examples of some cool restaurant websites, like for Little Dipper and Lord's, I like the fonts that they've chosen for both the names and their menus. I also really like the constellation theme of Little Dipper. I also included Pete's Tavern because on their gallery page I like how they arrange the photos row by row according to what's pictured so that may be something I follow for my gallery page. I think that for now, I'll focus on it being an Italian restaurant because I want it to feel cozy but still modern, kind of like the vibe that New York gives so I'll have warmer tone colors but maybe a dim or opaque background photo of the "interior". I want it to be elegant but still cool and functional.
